The people named above provided electronic signatures and assent. The service then sealed the completed document under its own organizational certificate, identified by the key id above. That seal is not a personal certificate held by any signer, and no claim is made that it is an eIDAS advanced or qualified electronic signature.

Publication is refused unless the sealed bytes are read back at the assurance level named above. Acceptance, sealing, and publication happen at different times; the sealing and publication times are recorded in the evidence document published alongside this agreement, which also lists what each digest covers.
